Presents:

The Nuts and Bolts of Response to Intervention or " RtI " Two-Day Institute

Sally Grimes, Instructor

Course #: 10-228B

Date: March 30, and April 13, 2010

Time: 8:30 AM– 3:30 PM

Registration and coffee: 8:00am – 8:30am

Register by: March 16, 2010

This workshop will provide an overview of RTI and its implications for providing reading instruction that is jointly planned and monitored by general education and special education administrators and staff taking "collective responsibility" for all students. The focus is K-4. The presenter will describe:

- how this desired framework can be set up by a literacy team working together
- what curricula, assessment tools and professional development support it
- how a multi-tiered continuum of instruction uses scientific research-based interventions that link remedial and preventive efforts within a school or district

What is Response to Intervention?

Response to Intervention (RtI) is a school-wide system for improving student achievement by directly linking ongoing assessment to instructional decision-making to accomplish three important goals:

- Ensure that every student in need of intervention receives high-quality, research-based instruction as soon as the need is detected and reallocate resources so that consistency in instruction is provided
- Provide progress-monitoring tools to ensure that teachers are making data-based decisions about interventions and adjusting interventions based on the data
- Provide a practical and scientifically defensible method of qualifying students as eligible for special education services based on their response to the interventions being provided
